

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

HAPPINESS AND THRIFT*

A BENEVOLENT MUTUAL AID SOCIETY, 1837-1904.

As one of the many who are much indebted to Booksellers and Publishers, I accepted with pleasure the invitation from my friend, your President, to attend your Annual Meeting this year; and I have thought it might be useful on this occasion to trace up the history of the Institution from materials which have been kindly furnished me by your Board of Directors.

Venerable as the Institution is, it was not the first effort among the Booksellers for the mutual alleviation of distress. It is on record that on the "11th of September, 1806—all but a hundred years ago—at the Globe Tavern in Fleet Street a numerous meeting was held, at which was unfolded the outline of a plan for a General Association of all the Booksellers of the United Kingdom, and it was resolved," in that sanguine spirit which so often leads to ultimate, if not immediate, success, that a Society should be established, "the principal objects of which should be to afford mutual aid, support and protection, to promote each other's interest and happiness, and principally to increase the consequence and character of the profession in general by raising it to, and maintaining it in, that degree of rank and respectability which, from the present improved and improving state of literature, it ought to hold in society."

Our knowledge of this Society ceases with the end of the prospectus, and we might hazard the guess that the effort was outweighed by its good intentions.

This attempt was followed after a considerable interval by another less ambitious effort. The Institution proposed was for the assistance of Booksellers and Booksellers' Assistants, being members, and their widows and children, when in necessitous circumstances.

On the 7th of December, 1836, a circular-letter to the trade was addressed from a bookseller's shop in the Poultry:—

"SIR,

"You are invited to attend a preliminary Meeting of Booksellers at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate Street, on Friday, the 16th inst., at eleven o'clock in the forenoon precisely, to take into consideration the means of establishing an Institution for the assistance and support of decayed Booksellers. The accompanying Rules are submitted as suggestions, and your attention is earnestly solicited to prepare and propose, such as may appear most suitable and efficient for the furtherance of the object in view.

I am, Sir,

Yours respectfully,

GEORGE GREENLAND."

Then followed a series of fifty-two Rules, which are substantially incorporated in your present Rules and Regulations.

In one respect Mr. Greenland was even more ambitious than were the good folks of 1806, namely, as to funds—he wanted £20,000, and he lived to see his wish realised ; but his general scheme was moderate in range, and it seems that he had the happy knack of interesting in his plan those who were in a position to assist him with money, influence, and good counsel, and to co-operate in personal assistance.

The effort resulted in a decided success ; no less than £5,000 was collected in a year, and the leaders of the trade shared with the rank and file in the general management. The first subscription list is full of interest. Some of the houses represented there are now a memory, some are forgotten, others interest us still.

The list is interesting, and as it is not very long, I really think I might read it :—

The long list of subscriptions is followed by the information that "Books are open at Messrs. Smith, Payne & Smiths, Bankers"—the famous banking house of No. 1 Lombard Street—"for the reception of donations on account of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, who will give receipts for the same."

The Institution was formally inaugurated at a General Meeting on February 15, 1837, at Stationers' Hall; the chair was taken on that occasion by Alderman Thomas Kelly, a bookseller, one of the first Trustees, who in that year was Lord Mayor of London.

With this auspicious commencement the record is a continuous story of steady progress. Subscriptions, donations, and members were each year added to the roll.

The following extract from an "Address to the Trade," prepared by the management in 1839, is applicable to-day: "The Directors of this Institution, being desirous that its benefits should be extended to all who are engaged in the bookselling business, and fearing that its constitution is not generally understood, have determined upon presenting the following statement of the principles on which it is established for the consideration of those who have not yet enrolled their names among its members. In so doing they would particularly direct the attention of such persons to the object for which the Society was established, to the nature of its management, and to the advantages that may be derived from being connected with it."

The object sought to be accomplished is "the establishment of a fund for the permanent relief of Booksellers and Booksellers' Assistants, being members, and their widows, and temporary assistance of members, their widows and children, when in necessitous circumstances."

The management then and now is of a popular kind, the whole of the Board being elected by, and responsible to, the members in General Meeting assembled.

"The advantages which this Institution presents are such as ought to secure the approbation of all who are desirous of making any provision for themselves and for their families against the unforeseen circumstances to which all may be subjected. Provision is made for cases of sickness and distress, and this is not only applicable to the members themselves, but is extended to their widows and to their children, and when the infirmities of age or other causes prevent their following their avocations, annuities are granted to members and to the widows of members; the amount of such assistance to be given, and of annuities to be granted, being wisely left to the discretion of the Board of Directors for the time being. Great advantage is expected to result from the discretionary power thus given to the Board, not only as affording the constant means of proportioning the expenditure of the Institution to its resources, but still more as presenting the opportunity of discriminating between the misfortunes of the industrious and the less worthy applicants. But to prevent any abuse of this discretionary power, and to guard against the possibility of its administration falling into a partial and an improper direction, the Board of Directors has been made as open and its composition as varied as possible. While to such as are in affluent circumstances, and have not the prospect of ever needing the assistance which the Institution offers, the Directors appeal, earnestly requesting their co-operation in endeavouring to increase the provision which is made for the industrious and deserving of our trade, and thereby alleviating the sorrows of the afflicted, rendering important assistance to those who are in distress, and ministering to the necessities of the fatherless and the widows."

This appeal, written a few months after Queen Victoria ascended the throne, was not made in vain. Contributions came in freely, not only from the houses in the book trade, but from printers, stationers, paper-makers, and bookbinders. The proprietors of the daily and weekly papers, headed by The Times and The Athenæum, assisted the efforts of the booksellers by appreciative encouragement in their columns and by munificent gifts of money. Eventually, from various sources universally throughout the trade, the very substantial permanent fund of £80,000 was created. The donors were men of business, who knew the value of the Institution, and were able to judge of the means adopted in dealing with the fund they helped to build up.

It is sometimes argued that when a man subscribes to a Benefit Society he wants to know definitely how much, under given circumstances, he may expect to receive in return, and that he ought not to be subject to the caprice of a Board of Directors.

It is, of course, possible that such a discretion may not always be wisely used—even a Board of Directors may err—but the objection is really theoretical, and in practice it is found that Directors lean in the direction of generosity. The best test is, after all, the test of experience, and it is perfectly certain that if, under your constitution, it were possible to name a sum to which every member would be entitled under given circumstances, that sum would not be a tithe of what is under the present system actually received by those in need. And who else would care to make a claim?

The rules appear to be applicable to all cases of genuine distress; the Directors cannot if they would—and I am sure they would not if they could—withhold assistance from any genuine claimants. Each member, widow, and child possesses a clearly established right to benefit as far as funds permit and circumstances require.

In the year 1840 another addition to the usefulness of the Institution was introduced, viz. the Honorary Medical Officers. It was found that in some cases of illness in respect of which claims were made a large proportion of the sums granted was required to pay for medical assistance. This state of things was remedied once and for all by the attachment to the Society of doctors and surgeons of standing, who in their turn have continued to minister freely and readily to your needs. These gentlemen, I am assured, treat the members with the utmost consideration, and while it is usual for the patient to visit the doctor in his consulting-room, the doctors have been good enough to attend patients who were unable to leave their own homes.

The prospects of the young Society were now full of hope. In seven years it had become firmly established upon the substantial basis of a capital of £13,000, and what is not less important, a fund of energy among its members.

The next step was the

FOUNDATION OF THE BOOKSELLERS' RETREAT.

In the vigour of youth the Society felt that it was capable of further effort. They had their relief fund in working order, the free medical assistance was arranged, and it seemed a natural and necessary complement to the activity thus organised that a place of residence should be provided where the aged annuitants might retire to spend their declining years.

The plan of establishing a haven of rest as an appendage of the Society was speedily put into execution. As the Society's funds could not be utilised for the purpose, an affiliated Society was formed to collect funds to pay for the necessary site, the erection of buildings, and the maintenance of the property; the parent Institution to pay the annuities to the inmates. A number of building sites were inspected, but none of them appeared suitable for the purpose. At this juncture, there appeared one of those friends of the movement who have never failed in the time of need. Of such friends the kindred associations of the Institution and the Retreat have ever had a happy experience.

The difficulty in the selection of a site was overcome by the timely offer of several acres of land pleasantly situated in the village of Abbot's Langley, in Hertfordshire. The gift was gratefully accepted, the grounds were tastefully laid out, and now, after sixty years of constant attention, the gardens and shrubberies are sufficiently extensive and matured to secure to the Retreat the delightful seclusion of woodland scenery.

The name of the munificent donor of this estate was John Dickinson, of the famous paper mills in that county.

The history of the Retreat has already been told to the present generation in the published account of the Jubilee Meeting held there in 1887, when a large company assembled to celebrate the fiftieth year of the Institution.

For many years after 1845, when the stone-laying ceremony was performed by the Right Honourable the Earl of Clarendon, and the occasion in 1846 of the opening of the Retreat by Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, the story of the two Institutions is one of continual prosperity.

In 1845 the Directors stated that "they have fortunately been enabled at each Annual Meeting since the Institution was founded in 1837 to make a most favourable report, indeed; nothing whatever has occurred to cause even a momentary check to its prosperity." It was in 1846 that the

THOMAS BROWN

Directors put forth a statement of the principles upon which they acted in their management of the Institution. They said:—"The Directors have ever been particularly desirous of affording to the members generally the utmost information of their proceedings consistent with the faithful performance of their important and responsible duties. But while knowing that the record of those proceedings is always open to the inspection of members, they would yet consider it a violation of a sacred trust were they to publish abroad the name of any of their brethren who had been compelled to avail themselves of the assistance which this Institution was established to afford."

The number and variety of claims made upon the funds at length began to have an effect upon the sum available each year for addition to the accumulated funds. Every year from the commencement until 1862 some addition was made to the capital. Then for a few years the expenditure was slightly above the income, but at no time has the permanent fund of £30,000 invested with the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt been encroached upon. While touching the subject of the funded capital, we may refer to the noble benefactions identified with the name of Thomas Brown. In 1869 Mr. Brown bequeathed £10,000 to the Institution and a like sum to the Retreat. It should be remembered that this munificence is by no means all that the kindred institutions owe to Thomas Brown. For twenty-five years he served them as Treasurer, and was thereby in a position of gaining an unrivalled knowledge of their affairs. In his lifetime he made handsome contributions, one item being £1,000 to be set aside for a Medical Fund, which relieves the inmates of the Retreat of all expense in that direction.

Those were halcyon days, and with those two gifts of £10,000 it would almost seem as if the members decided that the need for energy and enthusiasm had disappeared. The spur had been removed, donations fell off, not many members joined, and those who did were almost invariably of those who looked to derive substantial benefit from the Institution rather than those who brought authority and support with them.

By the year 1871 it was brought home to the members that the surplus capital was being encroached upon. There was a continual increase in the applications for relief; while decreasing donations and subscriptions for membership were quite insufficient to meet the expenditure.

The difficulty was met by a series of special donations, and a reference to the General Statement of Receipts will show that from the year 1878 to the present time the annual and special donations have formed an important part of the income.

An appeal for assistance by means of Public Dinners was not then considered advisable, but one item may be mentioned, viz., a donation of £38. 8s. 6d. in 1875, being the proceeds of an amateur performance at the St. James's Theatre. The series of Public Dinners inaugurated in 1890 brought incidentally a small amount of money into the funds, and as social gatherings they were highly successful, bringing together every class connected with the trade. Though managed by the officers of the Institution, the interest in the Dinners is of a general character, and therefore does not call for further mention here.

The subject of membership subscription calls for special notice. For a period of thirty years—that is, until the year 1867—the subscription payable for life membership was twenty guineas for a person under thirty years of age. Persons over thirty were admitted upon the payment of £21 and a varying "fine," increasing in amount with the age of the incoming member.

The fine was £3. 10s. up to age 35, £8 up to 40, £13 up to age 45, and up to age 50 the fine was £20. This system was abolished in the year 1867.

Experience has proved the desirability of charging an increased subscription from those joining when they were approaching middle age, and of inducing younger persons to become members before the age of twenty-five. The last-mentioned age of twenty-five was taken as the starting point for the new scale of payments, and for this age the original subscription of £21 was allowed to stand. It should be borne in mind that the recently revised scales (under which the system of monthly instalments are introduced) are calculated upon the same basis.

The principle holds good that it is better for the individual to join the Society at an early age, and it is with a view of obtaining young recruits that the Institution wisely continues to offer the inducement of the very favourable subscription which has been in force from the beginning.

The Annual Meeting of March, 1902, was memorable from the fact that on that occasion the first note of the new forward movement was sounded by the President. The Board of Directors responded, and a new departure was taken for the purpose of bringing the affairs of the Institution to the notice of the trade. The Directors invited assistance from some of the members who were outside the management, thus spreading interest in the propaganda.

Steps were taken to advertise the Institution and to explain its work, and much of the success which has resulted may be traced to the illustrated booklet which was issued under the title, "The Booksellers' Provident Institution: What it is and What it does."

Since the President's appeal of March, 1902, the number of new members elected is 161, while the funds have been increased by upwards of £2,000. To equal these results we must turn back to 1837. The General Meetings of 1903 and 1904 have partaken of the character of festivals, and by the courtesy of the Court of the Stationers' Company have been held at Stationers' Hall. On each occasion the place was filled not with members only, but with the general body of the trade.

In some of the records of past years mention has been made of the diligent attendances of the President, Vice-President or Trustees at the monthly Board meetings. It is still the case that the Board is frequently attended by some of these gentlemen, while the President is rarely absent; and it is, perhaps, appropriate that a few remarks from his address at the Annual Meeting of 1904 should appear in this brief outline of the history and work of the Booksellers' Provident Institution. He speaks with knowledge and authority, and he said: "I can assure you, Gentlemen, that you will never regret the small sum which will qualify you to become a member of this Institution. The necessary sum has been reduced, and the terms of payment have been made more easy, and I really think now that it is within the reach of the youngest and most humble member of the trade to avail himself of one of the various alternative systems of payment which will qualify him.

"What will he get by so doing? Now I am telling you what has been mentioned to members not twice or thrice, but what is a thirty times told tale. But I have no doubt there are some here who are not so familiar with the working of this Institution as we members are. The first thing he gets is the very best insurance against misfortune which is open to him as a member of the trade—or is open, I believe, to any trade whatever. For the very small sum, which he can pay either in one instalment, in three, six, or by an annual payment, he gets the certainty that he will never be driven to absolute want. Further than that, he gets the certainty that, should he marry and die, perhaps without being able to leave any provision for his wife, his widow will have the certainty that she will never be driven to want. And further, he has the certainty that his children, should he leave any, will also receive assistance. Well, he secures all this for a sum which is absolutely unexampled in insurance, and that is the first thing he will get. The next thing he will get, if he is prosperous, will be that he will have the consolation of knowing that he is doing something at any rate to relieve the necessity of others who are less fortunate than himself. Now I believe, Gentlemen, that that consideration is of greater importance than the other. No man should live his life here without doing something to help those who are less fortunate than himself, and whom it is in his power to help.

"Those are the two great advantages offered to those who make up their minds to join this Institution. There is a further advantage—one which I also set much store by. I think that those who meet in this Institution gradually get a sort of fellow-feeling one with the other. In the course of business necessarily there must sometimes be friction. Things do not always go right: there may be legitimate differences of opinion, and there will sometimes be a loss of temper. Now if people make friends at an Institution like this, such things are smoothed over. An Institution like this creates a feeling of fellowship and friendship, which would not be called into existence if we only met on the occasions that we had to meet in the course of business. However, that you will say is a matter affecting the Board of Directors, as they meet frequently and members do not. Well, things have changed in this respect. To begin with, there have been one or two committees started for carrying on certain branches of work of this Institution which members have been invited to join who are not on the Board of Directors. That seems a step in the right direction. The more we get in touch with each other the better. Moreover, a meeting, such as this, warmed by harmony and charmed by melody, gives us a unity which could not be obtained in the ordinary course of business. I cannot doubt that this Institution, if it goes on increasing and progressing as it has lately, and as I hope it will, will form a bond of union in the trade, and will tend to soften asperities and difficulties, and tend to make the transaction of business more human and more pleasant."

The public-spirited booksellers of the old days have left you a great inheritance. The ideals which animated your fathers should be an inspiration to those who, in these opening years of the Twentieth Century, share the membership of a Society founded by the faith and prudence of a bye-gone generation, a Society of which the present position and prospect afford abundant reason for gratification and hope.

A glance at the records of the Institution will show what a quiet and beneficent work has been accomplished between those early days and the present time. These gleanings therefore are offered first of all to the members of the Institution, to remind them of the increasing value of a concern in which they are themselves partners and of which they may well be proud, and then to prospective members, i.e. all those persons engaged in the sale of books in the Metropolitan area, or, to adopt the geographical definition of our grandfathers, "within the limits of the twopenny post delivery." This phrase, quaint to our ears, suggests the contrast between those far away times and our own, but in spirit the constitution of the Society is the same to-day as it was in 1837.

And now, Gentlemen, passing from the instructive and interesting history of your Institution, may I say a few words to you about yourselves?

I shall probably not be wrong in assuming that you would like to have happy lives. How are you going to try? How are you going to set about it? We all know how to make ourselves miserable. That is simple enough. Be selfish, take offence easily, be extravagant, run into debt, eat and drink too much, and you will be miserable enough.

But how are you to secure happiness? On what does it depend? Money cannot make you happy, success cannot make you happy, friends cannot make you happy, health and strength cannot make you happy. All these make for happiness, but none of them will secure it. Nature may do all she can for her darling, the strongest: she may give you fame, health, money, long life—but she cannot make you happy. Every one of you must do that for himself. Our language expresses this admirably. What do you say if you have had a happy day? You say you have enjoyed yourselves.

If I were to mention one point, I would say, "Try to make others happy." You may not succeed, but depend upon it you will be happy yourselves.

It may be true that you cannot do much. As the Greek philosopher Epictetus said, "You are not Hercules; and you are not able to purge away the wickedness of others; nor yet are you Theseus, able to drive away the evil things of Attica. But you may clear away your own. From yourself, from your own thoughts, cast away, instead of Procrustes and Sciron, sadness, fear, desire, envy, malevolence, avarice, effeminacy, intemperance. But it is not possible to eject these things otherwise than by looking to God only, by fixing your affections on Him only, by being consecrated by His commands."

We read of and admire the heroes of old, but every one of us has to fight his own Marathon and Thermopylæ; every one meets the Sphinx sitting by the road he has to pass; to each of us, as to Hercules, is offered the choice of Vice or Virtue; we may, like Paris, give the apple of life to Venus, or Juno, or Minerva.

It is by no means the men who are most prosperous who are really the happiest. Many are miserable though they have, as it would seem, everything to make them happy. A life of earthly success is, however, full of perils and anxieties. If a man has not got the elements of happiness in himself, not all the beauty and variety, the pleasures and interests of the world can give it him. Misfortunes we must all expect in this beautiful and glorious but complex world, but the darkest shadows of life are those which a man himself makes when he stands in his own light.

A distinguished writer has said that there are two classes of men in the world: Some men make trouble, and some men take trouble.

Those who make trouble are unhappy themselves and a source of unhappiness to others, while those who take trouble are not only a source of happiness to others but to themselves also.

Perhaps you will say, We are still young—what can we do? You can do a great deal; indeed, if you are to grow up to be worthy Englishmen and Englishwomen, you must do a great deal. Some people seem to think that every boy grows up into a man. That is a great mistake. Man is man, and is master of his fate, and we are all what we make ourselves. We may make this world either a palace or a prison—either a triumphal march or a funeral procession. Many people, it has been truly said, spend much of their lives in making the rest miserable, and, in the words of Sir Thomas Browne, “buy the merry madness of a moment with the long penitence of after-years.”

Some people are always grumbling. If they had been born in the Garden of Eden they would certainly have found a great deal to complain of. Happiness depends much more upon what is within us than on what is without us. As Ruskin has well said, “To read, to think, to love, to pray—these are the things that make a man happy.” In the words of Milton—

The mind is its own place, and in itself
Can make a heaven of hell, a hell of heaven.

Or, as Shakespeare puts it—

All places that the eye of heaven visits
Are to the wise man ports and happy havens.

If you look at the world through a red glass, all seems red and rosy; if through a blue, all blue; if through a smoked one, all dull and dingy. Always try, then, to look at the bright side of things; and almost everything in the world has a bright side. There are some people whose smile, the sound of whose voice, whose very presence seems, like a ray of sunshine, to brighten a whole room. Greet everybody with a bright smile, kind words, and a pleasant welcome. It is not enough to love those who are near and dear to us. We must show them that we do so. You will not, I hope, consider that because you have left school your education is completed. On the contrary, it continues through life whether we will or not. The only question is whether what we learn in after-life is wisely chosen or picked up hap-hazard. "Every person," says Gibbon, "has two educations, one which he receives from others, and one, more important, which he gives himself." There is hardly any piece of information which will not come in useful.

"When I look back," says Sir Joshua Fitch, "on my own life, and think on the long-past school and college days, I know well that there is not a fact in history, not a formula in mathematics, not a rule in grammar, not a sweet and pleasant verse of poetry, not a truth in science which I ever learned, which has not come to me over and over again in the most unexpected ways, and proved to be of greater use than I could ever have believed. It has helped me better to understand the books I read, the history of events which are occurring round me, and to make the whole outlook of life larger and more interesting."

Some seem to think that they are born with a certain character which they inherit. Well, no doubt there is some amount of truth in that. But it is still more true that our character is what we choose to make it. In the words of a great German writer, Jean Paul Richter: "What you wish to be that you will be; for such is the force of our will, joined to the Supreme, that whatever we wish to be seriously and with a true intention, that we become." But to do so you must be careful. Temptations enough will come to you in life, but do not you go to them. Be masters of yourselves. "He that ruleth his spirit," said Solomon long ago, "is better than he that taketh a city." Finally, when you have done your best, do not be anxious. Above all, never despair. Trouble and sorrow are sometimes friends in disguise. We all enjoy the warm air and bright sunshine of summer, but Nature owes much to the snows and storms of winter.

As George Macdonald beautifully says:—

For things can never go badly wrong
If the love be true and the heart be strong;
For the mist, if it comes, and the driving rain,
Will be changed by love into sunshine again.

And yet there are many—especially girls, I think—who make themselves miserable on entering life by theological doubts and difficulties.

But these have reference, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, not so much to what they should do as to what they should think. After all, as Micah tells us, "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

As regards action, conscience is generally a safe guide; and the great difficulty is to follow it as we ought. Be careful how you choose your thoughts. "Peace of mind," says Ruskin—and I think it is one of the most beautiful of all his beautiful passages—"Peace of mind must come in its own time, as the waters settle themselves into clearness as well as quietness; you can no more filter your mind into purity than you can compress it into calmness; you must keep it pure, if you will have it pure, and throw no stones into it, if you would have it quiet." I am sure—and I know that my friends around me will agree—that you have now in your lives a glorious inheritance if you will only make the best of them. But you have also a great responsibility. Let us hope that some day you will do honour to the profession to which you owe so much, that you will yourselves add to the stock of human knowledge.

The fact is, that what we know, great as it is, and wonderful as are the discoveries that have been made, is almost nothing compared with that which we still have to discover. There is not a single substance in nature of which the whole of the properties are known to us. There is an immense field for future discoveries, many of which will certainly be of great importance; and it is very encouraging, I think, to see that discoveries in science have not been confined to men of great wealth and of great genius. On the contrary, some of the most important discoveries—some of those which have conferred the greatest blessings upon mankind—have been made by men who have had fewer advantages than you yourselves have enjoyed.

Let me give you the names of a few of these great men, and tell you how they began life. The great Naturalist Ray was the son of a blacksmith; Watt, who almost made the steam engine, of a shipwright; Franklin, who brought down the lightning on his kite, of a tallow-chandler; Dalton, the great chemist, of a hand-loom weaver; Frauenhofer of a glazier; Laplace, the astronomer, of a farmer; Linnæus of a poor curate; Faraday of a blacksmith; George Stephenson, who did so much for our railways, more, perhaps, than anybody else, was a working collier, and worked a long while at two-pence a day, and could not read till he was eighteen years of age; Sir Humphrey Davy was an apothecary's assistant; Wheatstone, who introduced the telegraph, was a musical instrument maker; Boulton, who has been called "the father of Birmingham," because he did so much for the development of that great city, was the son of a button maker; Galileo, Kepler, Sprengel, Cuvier, Sir W. Herschel, and many others, were all children of poor parents, and had nothing like the advantages in their education that you have had. Therefore, it is only reasonable to hope that many of you may take part in the great and triumphal march of science and in the increase of human knowledge.

all re-enter life on a higher or a lower plane according to our deserts: higher if we have striven to do right, lower if we have let ourselves sink here. However this may be, there is no doubt that every morning we wake rather better or rather worse than we were the morning before. Try to live so that you may wake up and not down.

"Mankind," said Emerson, "divides itself into two classes—benefactors and malefactors." If you belong to the latter you turn friends into enemies, make memory a pain, life a sorrow, the world a prison, and death a terror. While, on the other hand, if you can put one bright and good thought into the mind, one happy hour into the life of any one, you have done the work of a good angel.

Moreover you are particularly fortunate, as it seems to me, in the lot in life which has fallen to you. No doubt any business or occupation is in reality full of interest. Moreover, tastes differ.

But your work will be especially interesting—you will live among books. You will have special opportunities of knowing them and studying them. And you will find that the more you read the more you will enjoy reading.

Lord Macaulay seemed to have almost all that this world could give—wealth and fame, rank and power—and yet he has told us that he derived his greatest happiness from books—books which are open to every one of you.

In a charming letter to a little girl, he says: "Thank you for your very pretty letter. I am always glad to make my little girl happy, and nothing pleases me so much as to see that she likes books; for when she is as old as I am she will find that they are better than all the tarts and cakes, toys and plays and sights in the world. If any one would make me the greatest king that ever lived, with palaces and gardens and fine dinners, and wines and coaches, and beautiful clothes, and hundreds of servants, on condition that I should not read books—I would not be a king. I would rather be a poor man in a garret with plenty of books than a king who did not love reading." Ascham, in "The Schoolmaster," tells a touching story of his last visit to Lady Jane Grey. He found her sitting in an oriel window reading Plato's beautiful account of the death of Socrates. Her father and mother were hunting in the Park, the hounds were in full cry and their voices came in through the open window. He expressed his surprise that she had not joined them. But said she, "I wist that all their pleasure in the Park is but a shadow to the pleasure I find in Plato."

The history of the great publishing houses is most interesting—Carlyle said much more than that of kings and courtiers—and must be very stimulating to you. I trust each one of you may hope that he will be taught by their examples and encouraged by their success.

I believe, indeed, that the ancestors of the present Longmans and Murrys had been successful in other ways before they entered the noble profession of publishers. It is very remarkable how many of those of whom we are all proud rose from a very humble origin. Guy, the founder of Guy's Hospital, was the son of a lighterman. My old friend Robert Chambers was the son of a weaver, and walked to Edinburgh with a few shillings in his pocket; Constable was the son of a Land Steward and educated in the Parish School of Carnbee; Cadell started as his clerk; Blackwood's parents were very poor, and he commenced work in a shop at fourteen, as they could not afford to keep him longer at school; Cassell was the son of very poor parents and began life as a carpenter; the same applies to Colburn, who began life in the shop of Mr. Earle; J. W. Parker was bound apprentice to Mr. Clowes at fourteen; Nisbet was the son of a small Scotch farmer, who afterwards enlisted in a cavalry regiment; Moxon inherited nothing from his father except—and this I do not wish to undervalue—a love of poetry; Kelly's father was a shepherd; Virtue's father was a cart proprietor at Fogo, near Berwick, and he himself began life as a mason; Tegg was the son of a small grocer, was left an orphan at five years old, and was sent to school at Galashiels, £10 a year being paid for his board, lodging, clothing, and education. Moreover, when he had a little money, he was ruined by discounting a bill for a friend, and had to begin life again; Thomas Nelson was the son of a small farmer, and fought his own battle unaided; Simpkin and Marshall both began as assistants in the shop of Mr. Crosby; Mudie's father kept a small newspaper shop; W. H. Smith, the elder, was the son of very poor parents, and had to earn his living while still a boy; Routledge began as an assistant in the shop of Baldwin and Cradock; Bewick began life at fifteen, paying ninepence a week for his lodging, and living with the utmost economy.

Gentlemen, I said a few minutes ago that I thought you would probably wish to be happy. As you get on in life you will find that what you value most is not happiness, but peace, and if you will let me I will conclude by quoting a few words from Ruskin as to how you may secure it:—

“We complain,” he says in one of his most beautiful passages, “we complain of the want of many things: we want votes, we want liberty, we want amusements, we want money. Which of us feels or knows that he wants peace? There are two ways of getting it if you do want it. The first is wholly in your own power—to make yourselves nests of pleasant thoughts. . . . None of us yet know, for none of us have yet been taught in early youth, what fairy palaces we may build of beautiful thoughts—proof against all adversity. Bright fancies, satisfied memories, noble histories, faithful sayings, treasure-houses of precious and restful thoughts; which care cannot disturb, nor pain make gloomy, nor poverty take away from us—houses built without hands, for our souls to live in."

"Let me hope for you, Gentlemen, and I can wish you nothing better, that when you reach old age, you will have built for yourselves such fairy palaces for your souls to live in.

REPORT
OF THE
BOARD OF DIRECTORS
FOR THE YEAR 1905.

THE Report which your Directors have the pleasure of submitting indicates steady and continued progress on the part of the Institution during the past year. Since the year 1903, when the strength of the forward movement set on foot by the President in the preceding year was plainly seen, there has been the most welcome evidence of life and energy. In 1896 the Directors, while recording their gratitude for the beneficent work accomplished by the Institution during the sixty years of its existence, the magnitude of which was indicated by the expenditure of £64,644 upon its less fortunate members, were yet constrained to express their disappointment that it had been found necessary to infringe upon the capital during the year to the extent of £63. 1s. 6d., and that, notwithstanding all their efforts to commend the Institution to their brethren, only three new members had been persuaded to join in the twelve months. Three years later, in 1899, Expenditure exceeded Income by £49. 0s. 2d., and only seven members of the Trade joined the Institution. Your Directors have now a very different tale to tell. During the year 1905 twenty-six new members have been elected, and the Receipts have exceeded the Expenditure by £696. 9s. 1d.

As compared with ten and five years ago these figures are eminently satisfactory, though it would be better still if the standard of 1903 could be more nearly approached. Then 121 new members joined, raising the amount of subscriptions from £223. 19s. to £1,089. 18s. 8d., an achievement not to be forgotten and most worthy of emulation.

The Registrar of Friendly Societies having declined to receive further alterations of the original Rules, it became necessary to revise them throughout and bring them into conformity with the model provided by the Registrar. A Committee was appointed to prepare this revision, and the result of their labours was presented to the members and approved by them at a Special General Meeting called for the purpose on the 19th of October last. Your Directors desire to express their gratitude to the President for the labour he bestowed on this important work. He himself presented a complete draft for the consideration of the Committee, and thus considerably lightened their work.

Your Directors have pleasure in acknowledging the generosity of Mr. Hugh Spottiswoode, who very kindly sent twenty-five guineas to the Institution as some recognition of the share the Booksellers had in making the success of 1905 issue of "Printers' Pie."

Last year members had the privilege of listening to a very interesting speech delivered at the Annual Meeting by the Right Hon. Lord Avebury, and your Directors may be allowed to say that his Lordship has very kindly permitted its publication by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. for the benefit of the Institution under the title of "Happiness and Thrift."

The Institution has also to thank Mr. G. Seymour Snowden and the members of the West Kent Amateur Comedy Company for a Theatrical Entertainment at St. George's Hall, which resulted in an addition of £88 to the funds.

Your Directors have again to acknowledge their indebtedness to the Worshipful Company of Stationers for the use of their Hall on the occasion of the Annual Meeting referred to.

The Governing Body of the Booksellers' Provident Retreat have again made a generous grant to the funds of the Institution, the amount this year being £185.

During the year we have lost by death seven members, among them being one of the oldest, Mr. Thomas Reader, who joined the Institution in the first year of its existence, 1837, bequeathing the Institution a legacy of £50.

Another old and respected member, Mr. Henry Sotheran, passed away during the year, and he left the Institution £100 and a similar amount to the Booksellers' Provident Retreat.

Messrs. C. J. Longman, W. E. Green, J. Whitaker & Sons, Ltd., J. Collins Francis, and C. E. Layton again enabled the Committee to make special Christmas gifts to all those in receipt of assistance, and the members of the Board are grateful for their timely generosity.

The Honorary Medical Officers have very kindly continued their valuable services, and your Directors desire to record their appreciation of the benefits conferred upon the Institution by their efforts.

It has been necessary to consult the Honorary Secretary, Sydney Gedge, Esq., more frequently than usual in consequence of the revision of the Rules, and your Directors are very sensible of the high value of the services so willingly rendered to the Institution. They take pleasure also in acknowledging the addition of another year to the long period of assiduous service by the Assistant Secretary, Mr. George Larnier.

The Athenæum, the Publishers' Circular, the Bookseller and other literary and trade journals have at all times willingly inserted gratuitous notices and reports of the work of the Institution, and the Board desires to acknowledge these useful and necessary services.

Your Directors trust that the year's work has been such as to bind the members more closely to the Institution, and to encourage every one of them to make the most of any opportunity to commend the Institution to those who are eligible for membership, but have not as yet learned its privileges and benefits.

LIST OF LEGACIES, DONATIONS, AND
*SPECIAL ANNUAL DONATIONS
TO THE Booksellers' Provident Institution.

* The Special Annual Donations were instituted in 1873 to carry the Institution over a period of financial difficulty and prevent encroaching upon the permanent fund. Several wholesale firms and other friends agreed to subscribe various sums for a period of ten years, which have expired. Special attention is directed to this fact, as it is hoped that the friends of the Institution will continue their subscriptions and that funds will be forthcoming to carry on its good and useful work.
